she set a record

Sheila Castellarin is one of the youngest Home Service Directors of large gas companies in America. She is responsible for hiring, training and directing the activities of 39 people in her department.

Sheila also appears on radio and TV. She supervises the planning for future demonstrations. Just recently she flew to New York to talk to a group of Security Analysts.

All Columbia Gas home economists have varied careers. They demonstrate new gas appliances in homes...and in large auditoriums. They work with Girl Scouts. They help release the blind from dependence on others by teaching them how to cook with gas. They help homemakers with home planning.

Home economists at Columbia can build a rewarding future for themselves while working with and serving the entire community. Because Columbia Gas puts the emphasis on ability rather than seniority...just ask Sheila.

If you're interested in this kind of opportunity, contact our Director of Placement in New York. Or write to the Director of Employee Relations of the Columbia Group Company with which you'd like to start your career.

PULLMAN-STANDARD

"Selection highly competitive"

Pullman-Standard Executive Offices are located at 200 S. Michigan Ave. in Chicago.

"Selection highly competitive" will discourage some college seniors. Those we are seeking, however, whatever their race, creed, or color, thrive on competition while understanding the importance of cooperation.

As a medium-sized company (1200 salaried employees) with an excellent record, we are able to offer exceptional graduates exceptional training in the fields of accounting, engineering, industrial relations, manufacturing administration, marketing, and purchasing. Opportunities are excellent for those who can and will take advantage of these opportunities.

We have grown since 1867 by being selective, by being competitive, by proceeding on the assumption that quality is far more important than quantity.

For additional information on career opportunities with Pullman Standard write to me personally—

Harris Shane, Vice President
